

Jeanné Condie believes in the good that education provides to our children and our community and sees Merit's place in Utah Valley as unique and valuable. She graduated with a bachelor's degree in English Teaching from BYU and has spent the past 23 years as a homemaker, raising her four sons. She has homeschooled three of her boys at various times in their educational careers, and believes that traditional public schools do not have the only answers to the concerns we have for our world's future. Her oldest three boys have graduated high school and are now pursuing college, mission, and career opportunities. The youngest is in 10th grade at Merit.

Jeanné has volunteered in her sons' classrooms since they were in preschool, has served in various PTA board positions, and created and run a homeschool co-op. She loves meeting and working with new people and learning from their perspectives and experiences. She is excited to be on the school board and to help Merit pursue its mission of service, excellence, and principled leadership.
